About the artwork

Layers of sand, silk paper, and glimpses of fabric form the walls of a home that quietly carries memory, love, and the traces of life lived. Horizontal textile layers suggest foundation and continuity, while red and gold accents fold through the composition like whispers of presence, vitality, and precious moments. The work evokes the home as a living vessel, absorbing stories, care, and emotion over time. Walls become witnesses and containers of love and labor, holding the luminous traces of intimacy, nurture, and memory. In this piece, the home is not only structure but a keeper of what endures, the quiet accumulation of connection, tenderness, and devotion.
