About the artwork

This work explores embodied bodies, intertwined in a state of waiting; where tension becomes physical, almost palpable. These figures exist in an intense suspension, as if caught between presence and transformation, holding within them an unspoken pressure that runs through their gestures, their closeness, and their silence. This waiting is not passive; it is charged, dense, and unstable. It becomes a space where bodies no longer simply exist, but press against one another, merging, resisting, and revealing an inner force that cannot be contained.
