About the artwork

During the harsh summer when my home country and the region were engulfed in turmoil, conflict, and war, I created this work to reflect the overwhelming emotions that poured from each of us—pain, grief, shock, and despair. The large shape that emerges in the piece, resembling a heart or lungs, symbolizes the weight of these feelings. It reminded me of Jesus on the cross, asking, "Why have you forsaken me?" This powerful cry of abandonment felt like the only word capable of expressing the state of those suffering through such profound anguish. I titled this work "Forsaken" because it embodies that sense of being lost, alone, and unheard in the face of overwhelming pain.
