About the artwork

This is an imagination of the Goddess "Allat," whose cult in pre-Islamic Arabia extended from Yemen in the south to the Levant in the north and from Taif in the west to Thaj in the east. She appeared as a mother goddess, a fertility goddess, and a warrior goddess. She assimilated and interacted with Athena, Atargatis, Nemesis, and Minerva. Her name is the feminine version of "Allah". Together with Al-Uzza, the warrior goddess, and Manat, the goddess of fate, they were called Allah's daughters.
